1er mai 2019, Heppenheim : Crime, Justice and Elites

The colloquium provides an open forum for discussion, debate and the presentation of PhD-, postdoc and other research projects related to the history of crime and justice in the early modern and modern period. It aims for an interdisciplinary exchange between scholars of a wide range of subjects such as history, legal history, sociology, anthropology, ethnology, humanities, political science and others. Core issues that will be addressed are various forms of crime and delinquency, law and normativity, criminal prosecution and justice, punishment and social control as well as sources and methodical approaches. We also invite contributions of scholars who would like to enter into a dialogue with researchers from the field of crime and criminal justice even though the mentioned topics would only constitute a part of the respective projects.

Both, proposals for panels of 2-4 speakers as well as proposals for individual presentations are accepted.

The 6th colloquium focuses on elites in a political, economic, social or cultural context, their role in the administration of justice and the legal system as well as specific forms of deviance and delinquency of such groups. While recent studies have addressed violent crime of elites (e.g. feuds and duels) or the involvement of elites in white-collar crimes, the conference aims to also address further potential fields of research in order to gain comparative perspectives on the role and function of elites in the history of crime and criminal justice.

Hence, possible topics for presentations could cover :

- 1) Ruling, political and social elites- feuds, duels, violent crimes- political crime : (high) treason, lese majesty, political violence, assassinations- corruption, bribery- state crime, malpractice, crimes committed by authorities, states or public officials
- 2) Economic elites - fraud, corruption- forgery, counterfeiting
- 3) Cultural and religious elites- religious deviance, crimes of church officials- deviance and crime in school, university, educational institutions- deviance and crime in healthcare/ of medical officials
- 4) Specific prerogatives, privileges and functions of elites in the system of law and justice- political and social elites as office-holders in the system of law and justice- privileged/ special jurisdictions, legal forms of action, privileges- legal positions and options for action of elites in comparison to other social groups- role and function of elites in practices of extra- and infrajudicial conflict regulation.

Additionally, there will be an open section with space for presentations that do not focus on elites but on other topics related to the history of crime and criminal justice.

We particularly encourage scholars to contribute proposals for panels or single presentations in the open section.
